

Village Hall Guide to Funders

in cumbria

Village Halls are at the very heart of our communities. ACTion with Communities in Cumbria supports the volunteers who manage these facilities with guidance on: Governance, Funding & Project Planning, and People Skills.

Introduction

There are lots of different ways of raising money:

- Holding events that people will pay to attend (i.e. a ceilidh) or where they will spend money (i.e. a cake sale)
- Asking for sponsorship for taking part in a challenge (i.e. marathon or long-distance swim)
- Selling something; village halls “sell” or hire out space but might also sell goods such as calendars or tea towels to raise money
- Requesting donations from local residents or companies towards to cost of a new piece of equipment or upgrading facilities
- Applying for grants

In this guide we’re focusing on applying for grants. Funders, or grant makers, exist to give money to organisations which provide solutions to the problems they want to fix. If a funder is interested in fixing the problem of rural isolation then a village hall, which provides services and activities that reduce isolation, could offer them a solution.

Who makes grants?

- The National Lottery; there are different lottery grant making bodies which make grants according to their area of interest i.e. Sport England, The BIG Lottery, Heritage Lottery Fund
- Charitable Trusts; charities that are set up to give money away. Sometimes they’ve been established by a wealthy benefactor or are the charitable arm of a large company. They may raise money annually through holding events or requesting donations such as Children in Need or Comic Relief
- Public organisations such as district councils or national park authorities

The Basics

There are some fundamental questions you should ask before you start to consider who to approach for funding. Without asking these questions your project, and therefore your funding applications, won’t stand up to scrutiny:

- Why are you doing this project?
- What difference will it make to people in your community?
- Is there really a need for it?
- If there is a need, how do you know? What evidence do you have?

The most common mistake we see village halls make when they’re applying for funding is to focus on the immediate problem “the roof is leaking; it needs fixing” rather than explaining the difference that a comfortable, watertight village hall will make to local people.

How do you know there is a need for your Hall?

You will have to provide some sort of evidence that people need your Village Hall. Try consulting ‘user groups’; the groups of people that use the hall already as well as local residents who may not use it. ACT has examples of survey forms that you can use.

See what other information exists to support your case. ACT has Parish Profiles for nearly every parish in Cumbria on our website which could give you background information and statistics about your area to support your application: <https://www.cumbriaaction.org.uk/resources/parish-profiles>

If your parish or community has produced a ‘Community Led Plan’ or ‘Parish Plan’ it’s possible that people will have been questioned about the village hall or community facilities as part of the consultation.

Completed Plans are also on the ACT website: <https://www.cumbriaaction.org.uk/resources/community-led-plans> and, if your area has one, it should be on your Parish Council website too. If your Community Led Plan is more than five years old the consultation is likely to be out of date

What to put in an application

Many grant makers have application forms that you fill in. By answering the questions on the form you should have given them the information they need to decide whether to fund your project.

Some funders don't have application forms, or any guidelines about how to apply, so you need to write them a letter which contains all the information they need.

These letters will be read by trustees who need to understand very quickly what your project is and how much money you need. Your letter should be concise (ideally no more than two sides of A4 paper) and clear.

If there's little information about a Trust you're interested in applying to, look for their annual accounts on the Charity Commission website: www.charitycommission.gov.uk.

Their accounts should give contact details and may give an indication of the size of grant they make. You might need to address your letter to the Chair, the Secretary or a named contact or 'correspondent' whose role it is to sift through applications.

If you use the following structure for your letter or application then you should have provided the trustees with all the information they need:

- A summary - A few lines that summarises everything in the letter. Write this last. This could be the only part of your application a busy board of trustees will see.
- A brief introduction about your organisation - Whether it's a charity (include the charity number), how it's managed, how long it's been in existence for.
- The problem you want to solve - i.e. older people in xxxx parish are becoming increasingly isolated due to loss of services.

- What you want to do about the problem - i.e. we want to create opportunities to bring people together and encourage different ages to mix.

- How we will do this - i.e. we will hold a volunteer-run community café once per week. State whether your project is financially sustainable; after you've covered the set-up costs will it pay for itself? If it won't, how will you cover the running costs in the future?

- Monitoring and evaluating the project - How will you track the numbers/type of people using your project and assess whether it's worked? i.e. we will record the numbers of people who use the community café and survey users about possible improvements once every six months.

For more information on monitoring and evaluating projects take a look at the ACT Guidance Sheet on this subject available on our website here:

www.cumbriaaction.org.uk/ResourcesPublications/GuidanceSheets

- The budget - What will you need to spend money on and how much funding are you looking for? How much money do you already have and where are you going to get the remaining money from?

Some funders will be happy to fund the whole of your project, but others will only want to contribute part of it and will want to see 'match funding' with some of the funds coming from other sources. They may want you to have raised some of it through community fundraising i.e. local fundraising from holding events etc.

Other funders will make grants for 'capital' projects such as equipment, building work, furniture, and others will want to make grants for 'revenue' projects such as salaries and running costs.

Finally, funders don't generally want to fund projects which have already started and so please get all the funding you need in place before you get your project underway. If necessary, break it down into smaller stages and fund each stage as a separate project.

The Grant Makers

The grant makers listed in this guide may be interested in giving you a grant but you will need to take a careful look at them before you apply.

They are likely to have specific criteria about what they will fund and your project might not fit. Others may have very broad aims but will have many more applicants than they can possibly fund and so the percentage of successful applicants will be small.

Information goes out of date quickly and they may have new deadlines for applications or change their priorities so always find out as much information as you can about them before you apply.

Finally, this list isn't exhaustive but it is a starting point. You can do your own search for funding by using databases like my funding central which is free to subscribe to for organisations with an annual income of less than £30,000 and a sliding scale of charges for organisations with a larger turnovers. Another one to try is Get Grants which has free resources.

If you can make contact with funders before you apply than this can help to build a relationship with them. You can meet local funders at the Funding Fairs organised by who also run funding training courses and offer funding advice.
